Updates to AFI 36-2903, Dress, Personal Appearance

WASHINGTON (AFNS) – The Air Force announced a series of uniform updates to Air Force Instruction 36-2903, Dress and Personal Appearance of Air Force Personnel, effective July 13, 2018.

“These changes stemmed from the 100th Air Force Uniform Board, which incorporated direct feedback from Airmen,” said Lt. Gen. Gina Grosso, Deputy Chief of Staff, Manpower, Personnel, and Services. “There are additional Uniform Board initiatives that are ongoing and still being analyzed for consideration and implementation by senior leaders.”

The notable changes are, but not limited to:

GROOMING AND APPEARANCE STANDARDS

■ No minimum hair length for females, but up to a maximum bulk of three-and-half inches from scalp, allowing for proper wear of headgear.

■ Females are also authorized locs, which must be lightly fused or interwoven to present a neat, professional appearance.

DRESS UNIFORM

■ All enlisted personnel may wear three-and-a-half inch or four-inch chevrons.

■ All or some ribbons and devices may be worn on service dress uniform.

■ All, some or no ribbons and devices may be worn on blue service uniform.

OUTER GARMENTS, HEADGEAR, RANK INSIGNIA AND ACCESSORIES

■ While off duty in civilian clothes males are authorized to wear earrings on or off installation.

■ Females are authorized to wear round or square white diamond, gold, white pearl or silver earrings as a set with any uniform combination.

■ Eyeglasses and sunglasses may have a small logo that can contrast with frame color or lenses. Conservative, clear, slightly tinted or photosensitive lenses are also authorized.

■ Airmen may wear either a sling style backpack or two strap backpack.

■ Handbags for all uniform combinations will be solid black leather or vinyl without ornamentation with black or white stitching.

PHYSICAL TRAINING GEAR

■ Short- and long-sleeved solid white, black or light gray form fitting undershirts may be worn and visible under the short-sleeved shirt.

■ A balaclava (black) may now be worn with PT gear while performing physical fitness activities outdoors.

New parental leave policy implemented

19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

In accordance with the Department of Defense Military Parental Leave Program, the Air Force will be expanding the parental leave policy on non-chargeable leave entitlements following the birth or adoption of a child.

Effective immediately, the new policy applies to Total Force Airmen who are birth mothers and fathers, same-sex couples, as well as adoptive and surrogate parents.

Under the new policy, AFI 36-3003, Military Leave Program, outlines three forms of non-chargeable leave following a qualifying birth event or adoption: maternity convalescent leave, primary caregiver leave and secondary caregiver leave.

Parental

Air Force is trying to give more time back to the Airmen by increasing the amount of leave the secondary caregiver can take," said Staff Sgt. Brendan Hayes, 19th Comptroller Squadron financial operations flight supervisor. "The increased leave of the secondary caregiver allows a little more time for the family dynamic to come together before the parent returns to work."

Now maternity convalescent leave is six weeks, primary caregiver leave is six weeks and secondary caregiver leave is three weeks. Every birth mother will have convalescent leave. Caregiver leave is given in addition to the convalescent leave.

For all three types of parental leave, the allotted time off must be taken all at once and cannot be split up. Primary and secondary caregiver leave can be taken any time within the first year after a child's birth or adoption.

"Giving birth is exhausting, and new mothers really do need that time to just let the body recuperate," said Tech. Sgt. Laprincess Day, an expecting mother. "The fact they [Air Force] gave the option to have both parents home to take care of the baby for even a little more time is really good."

Covered service members having a child by birth, adoption or surrogacy will determine which parent is the primary and secondary caregiver. Designations for caregiver status should be made as early as possible and follow Department of Defense guidance. Each parent can only hold one caregiver status per birth event or adoption; for example, a secondary cannot transfer their leave to the primary caregiver.

Previously, Air Force policy authorized 12 consecutive weeks of maternity convalescent leave to female Airmen who gave birth.

Additionally, 10 days of non-chargeable leave were given to an Airman whose spouse gave birth. Reserve Component Airmen should refer to Air Force Instruction 36-3003 for specific eligibility requirements.

The Air Force policy, authorized by the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2017, is effective immediately and retroactive to December 23, 2016.

For additional information regarding the Military Leave Program, please visit AFI 36-3003 or call the LRAFB finance office at 501-987-8294.

How to properly discard old uniforms, training gear

By Airman 1st Class Kristine M. Gruwell
19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Due to the upcoming uniform changes and increase in mission oriented protective posture gear training, all Airmen need to be sure they are properly discarding their Airman Battle Uniforms, MOPP gear and all other military uniforms.

Whether the uniform is for training or operational purposes, military gear of any sort needs to be discarded in the proper fashion.

There are a few different ways Airmen can dispose of their gear.

Do:

■ Airmen can donate their old military uniforms to their local Airman's Attic or Little Rock Spouses' Club Thrift Shop. The Little Rock Air Force Base Airman's Attic and LRSC Thrift Shop is located in building 864.

■ Local Air Force Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps units use old uniforms for their cadets. Airmen are able to donate their old Airman Battle Uniforms to these units.

Do Not:

■ Throwing any uniform into a dumpster is violation of operation security. Uniforms can be used by the adversary to imitate an Airman which could give them access to areas on an installation. Therefore, if an Airman needs to discard their uniform, they can use one of the methods above.

■ Airmen cannot sell their issued items to other individuals. According to AFI 36-3014 section 2.2, depending on the kind of discharge, Airmen can either keep uniformed items, return uniformed items to the Air Force for reissue or return uniformed items to the Air Force so the Air Force can prepare them for disposal.

■ Airmen are issued training MOPP gear upon arrival to LRAFB. Before Airmen leave they are required to turn in their issued MOPP gear. Therefore, individuals should not attempt to discard this training gear in any way. If MOPP gear somehow gets used in a real world situation, there are steps taken by qualified shops to discard of the gear appropriately.

■ Airmen who wish to discard old uniform items

Cascadia calls on LRAFB to assist in demonstrating capabilities

STORY AND PHOTOS BY
AIRMAN 1ST CLASS RHETT ISBELL
19TH AIRLIFT WING PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Cascadia.

It's a subduction zone along the western coast of the United States set to cause an earthquake every few hundred years capable of devastating much of the western seaboard in a matter of minutes.

To minimize the fallout of such a catastrophic event, Kingsley Field, Oregon, was designated as a collection point for relief efforts of a potential disaster. Little Rock Air Force Base, Arkansas, was called upon to assist Kingsley Field in demonstrating the demands and capabilities of air lift in a sustained humanitarian aid situation.

"It's a two-in-one exercise," said Lt. Col. Christopher Wright, 173rd Fighter Wing chief of wing plans. "The main objective is to be able to host airlift-centered planes during a humanitarian response to the Cascadia earthquake and identify limiting factors in being able to properly manage them. We also had the added benefit of being able to have the C-130s and F-15s fly together."

Having prior experience with flying C-130s, Wright felt that Little Rock's robust combat airlift capability would be a perfect fit for generating the data necessary to lay the groundwork for hosting a large-scale humanitarian mission.

“We performed a stress test of Kingsley Field’s real-world capabilities to bring in aid immediately following a simulated tsunami or earthquake disaster,” said Capt. Derek Potter, 61st Airlift Squadron C-130J pilot. “I think it was a great learning experience for us and believe the unit here got what they needed to perform their mission successfully.”

Along with testing Kingsley Fields airlift capabilities, Little Rock Air Force Base was able to conduct joint training operations with the F-15 school house including; air-to-air engagements and escort tactics to the benefit of both units. Both units also found it helpful to be able to sit down and discuss what was and wasn’t effective in the air.

“One of the mission sets we train to is offensive counter air,” said Capt. Chris DuBois, 114th Fighter Squadron F-15C instructor pilot, “which means getting an asset into a contested area. Working with the C-130s, we were able to practice for this mission a lot more effectively and see what it’s like to integrate with them for the mission.”

Working to optimize mission time and manpower, LRAFB and Kingsley Field took the first steps towards a more effectively cared for coast and higher quality Air Force.

“I feel like this was a great first start, and there needs to be more exercises like this because you can never have enough practice for Cascadia,” Wright said. “It’s got to be a joint effort, and we need to tie ourselves together more. It’s invaluable training, and I hope we can set up a curriculum for the school house at LRAFB and for the school house here in the future.”
